overdose prevention advocates will continue to fight for laws and programs that make naloxone more available, but there is only so much they can do